

Weapons

Comedic One-Sheet

General Use One / Two-Liners

- Weaponizing children isn't a plot point for a horror movie, it's how Midwesterners deal with divorce.
- Weapons isn't the only movie about an notably pale person who preys on kids. The Michael Jackson biopic is out soon.
- There's a scene in Weapons with a buffet of hot dogs. Nice to see my recurring sex dreams represented onscreen.
- Jordan Peele's production company lost a bidding war for Weapons. He said, "Us?" and they said, "Nope. Get Out."
- The director of Weapons is planning a prequel about Aunt Gladys. It'll be called, "Fantastic Wigs and Where to Find Them".
- Movie theaters hosted showtimes at 2:17, a nod to a notable time in the movie. Turnout was low since nobody who's free at 2:17 in the afternoon can afford 2025 movie prices.
- Warner Brothers was behind The Alto Knights and Mickey 17, two of the biggest bombs of 2025, making it the perfect studio to release a movie called Weapons.
- Director Zach Cregger had a history in sketch comedy before turning to horror films. What a pivot: from doing sketch to being sketch.
- The plot of Weapons is the weirdest thing to happen in Pennsylvania since they yanked a rodent from the ground to determine the weather.
- The script for Weapons sold for $38 million, which is only slightly more than I paid for the ticket to see it.

Intros / Transitions

- Welcome back. We were talking about the movie Weapons, a movie starring Krusty the Clown's evil aunt.
- Today's topic is Weapons, the movie that makes rooting for Benedict Wong feel Benedict Wrong.
- Today we're discussing Weapons, the movie featuring the most awkward running scenes since Forrest Gump.
- Welcome back. We're talking about Weapons, a movie about a classroom full of students who fail to show up one day, which will give a different vibe to Senior Skip Days moving forward.
- And we're back, discussing Weapons, a movie whose debut was swamped by confused rednecks who thought "the premiere of Weapons" would be a particularly innovative gun show.